FEDERAL OFFICERS IN UTAH

Few persons realize the number of federal officers who now have their headquarters in Salt Lake City. They have but a faint idea of the army of officeholders necessary to uphold the dignity of the government of the United States in this community. When it is stated that the new federal building, erected at a cost of $500,000, has accommodations for but a portion of these officials; that it would take a building fully twice as large, and that there is already a sentiment in favor of enlarging the building, some idea of the importance of this part of the public service will be conveyed.

Local representatives of Uncle Sam draw salaries ranging from $6,000 a year, the amount paid Judge John A. Marshall, down to $50 a month, the amount paid some of the clerks and stenographers. The total annual payroll would be considered a heavy drain on any private business corporation in the state, but so long as congress is appropriating in the neighborhood of $1,000,000,000 at every session, it is considered a mere bagatelle by the men who hold the purse strings at Washington. A number of the local federal officers draw no salaries whatever, but are paid in fees.

It is not possible to give a complete local list of those who owe their positions to direct appointment from President Roosevelt, to some of the departments at Washington, or to some of those holding local positions. There are deputies and clerks galore. In addition to these, many state local positions through the civil service commission. There are in the community many letter-carriers, mail clerks, forest rangers and inspectors of various kinds. The following list includes all the principal federal officeholders of the community.

United States Court Officers.
John A. Marshall, district judge since 1896.
Jerrold R. Letcher, circuit and district clerk.
Margaret B. Connell, deputy clerk.
Hiram E. Booth, district attorney.
William M. McCrea, deputy district attorney.
William Spry, marshal.
Lucian H. Smyth, chief deputy marshal.
Julian Riley, office deputy.
Samuel H. Lewis, master in chancery.
B. Y. Golding, court crier and messenger.

United States Commissioners.
Charles Baldwin of Salt Lake City and six others in various parts of the state are United States commissioners. Charles Baldwin of Salt Lake City and three others in various parts of the state are referees in bankruptcy.

Numerous Other Officers.
J. J. Greenwald is surveyor of customs for the port of Salt Lake City.
E. H. Callister is collector of internal revenue.
Archibald Stuart, David E. Evans, Clarence Cowan, James H. Anderson and Mamie A. Callister are deputies.
E. D. R. Thompson is register of the land office for the state of Utah, and M. M. Kaighn is the receiver.

George E. Hair, Percy S. Sowers and Charles F. Read are special agents for the general land office.
Thomas Hull is surveyor general.
Dr. R. J. Hyatt is section director of the United States weather bureau.
James McCabe has charge of the United States immigration service.
V. C. Helges is surveyor and C. N. Gerry is statistician for the United States geological survey.
George S. Hickox is expert and agent in charge of the United States department of agriculture.
Arthur L. Thomas is postmaster.
Alonso P. Kessler is assistant postmaster and William S. Walker is cashier. In addition to these there are a large number of clerks and deputies in charge of various departments of the local postoffice.

There are many United States deputy mineral surveyors in Utah and a number of United States deputy surveyors.
No account is taken here of the United States army, department of Colorado, with headquarters at Fort Douglas. The Fifteenth infantry is stationed there at this time. Nor is any account taken of the United States recruiting station. There are 335 postoffices in Utah outside of Salt Lake City, which means a nice little army working for the general government in this department alone.

Many of the above-named officials have held office for years. Many others have been inducted into office within the last year or two, the changes in most cases being due to the vicissitudes of politics. Many of the offices are wholly political, and are given out as rewards for political service. Many others come directly under the operations of the civil service bureau, and in such cases the officers hold during good behavior. The federal officeholders who have not their headquarters in the federal building on Main and Market streets, are located in various buildings in the city.

NEW HOTEL TO BE OPENED.

Mrs. H. E. Bartlett, Who Has Made the Orpheum Hotel a Great Success, Will Embark in a New Venture.

With the close of the present year another new and modern downtown hotel is opened to the public by Mrs. H. E. Bartlett, for the past two years proprietor of the Orpheum hotel on South State street, in the Orpheum Theater building.

The new hotel is located on Broadway, the court running north from First South street between Main and State streets. The hotel is located in the Aztec block and is unquestionably one of the handsomest and most completely finished and furnished hotels in the city. It is a twenty-five room establishment, and Mr. Bartlett planned the arrangement of the rooms and the finishing of each personally. Each has hot and cold running water, and a clothes closet large enough to accommodate a trunk, if necessary, is a feature of every room. The entire hotel has been newly papered, tinted, cleaned and put into first-class shape.

Mrs. Bartlett is one of the most successful hotel proprietors in Salt Lake. Opening the Orpheum hotel on April 6, 1906, she has made that place the

Bar, Bank, Office and Store Fixtures

Within the coming year the west side in Salt Lake is to be graced with another fine business block, the immense warehouse, factory and office building to be erected by J. P. Paulson & Co. for the past eight years the largest saloon, office, store and bank outfitters in the intermountain country, and one of the largest institutions of its kind in the entire west.

The new building to be erected by the Paulson company is reproduced above. An immense piece of ground, 50 by 100 feet in the rear and 100 by 165 feet in the front, at Fourth West and Second South streets, has recently been purchased by the company, and $98,000 has been set aside to erect and equip the new warehouse, factory and office building.

When the establishment is completed and opened for the manufacture and sale of bar fixtures, office, bank and store fixtures, to say nothing of the sale of custom made house furnishings, the institution will be the only one of its kind in this section of the west, and its territory will extend practically from Salt Lake to Missouri river points and from Salt Lake to the Pacific coast.

The company is now located in the three-story building at 170 West Second South street, where for the past eight years J. P. Paulson has conducted the big business alone. The rapidity of the growth of the business, together with the constantly enlarging field of operations opening up for the concern, a month ago forced a reorganization and incorporation of the company, with Mr. Paulson at its head. The move was made by Mr. Paulson upon a realization that the record he has made for himself and his goods in the intermountain country and throughout the entire west, necessitates a very great enlargement of his factory and output, this in turn necessitating a new factory and warehouse. With the idea in view of making the concern the biggest thing of its kind in this section the new company was formed and incorporated. The corporation named its capital at $500,000.

J. H. Paulson President.

J. P. Paulson was elected president at the first meeting of the board of directors, John E. Bennett, of Salt Lake, is vice president, and N. Paulson is treasurer and manager. A. H. Bergman is secretary. These officials, with E. O. Howard, of Salt Lake, and George Musler, of Salt Lake, form the board of directors of the corporation.

It was in 1898 that Mr. Paulson first started his factory in Salt Lake. Beginning in a small building on West Second South street, he very shortly moved to the three-story building he now occupies. He at first occupied only the first and second floors of this building. His warehouse, salesroom and office occupied the first floor and his factory was located on the second floor. As the business grew and his trade increased and thrived, he was forced to get more room for his factory, and in 1905 he leased the third floor of the building and secured the basement. He now has over 2,000 feet of floor space in use, the factory being located on the second and third floors and the magnificent salesroom and office on the first floor. The basement is used for storage purposes.

Manufacturing the finest bar fixtures, billiards and pool tables, and turning out refrigerators, drug store fixtures, soda fountains, bowling alleys and general office and bank fixtures, Mr. Paulson has the past few years furnished up some of the finest and most exclusive banking and mercantile institutions in Utah and the other western states. The list includes largely with compressed air and there has never been a case of contagious sickness in the house since it was opened.

There are no better locations for a hotel in Salt Lake than that of the Orpheum. Centrally located, it is not five minutes walk from any big office building in the city, and is in the heart of the retail section of town. The depot cars carry passengers to within a block of the hotel and the buses direct to the entrance. The three largest theaters in the city are from a half to three blocks distant.

Mrs. Bartlett is supplied with a good sized waiting list. She has a host of regular patrons throughout the state the hotel is becoming more favorably and better known every week. Mrs. Bartlett knows thoroughly the ins and outs of the business, knows how to make her place well liked and inviting. She is one of the most successful business women in Salt Lake.

Her new venture on Broadway is already an assured success, for the rooms are practically all rented. Her prices at both the new place and the Orpheum are reasonable and as low as any in the city, where accommodations are as good and the location as central years, and the best testimony as to the manner in which he has handled this work is found in the fact that his western and intermountain trade has become enormous, reaching a figure in a few short years that Mr. Paulson had scarcely hoped for.

The new building to be built will be in two sections, the building on the 50 feet by the rear section being the warehouse, and the front section the factory and office building. In the latter on the ground floor will be located the salesroom and display room of the corporation, and the general offices of the latter. These will be elegantly fitted up as an example of the work turned out by the company. On the second floor will be located the dry kilns, the glue room and the general delivery and assembling room. The third floor will be given over to the cabinet-makers.

J. P. Paulson, president of the new company, is one of the best known and most influential business men of Salt Lake. He has come up from a man with a small business to a man with one of the largest manufacturing establishments in the west. He is a strong booster for the city and supports every worthy cause brought to his attention.

PASSED TO THE JURY.

Judge Martin decided that certain evidence was inadmissible. The attorney took strong exception to the ruling, and insisted that it was admissible.

"I know, your honor," said he, warmly, "that it is proper evidence. Here I have been practicing at the bar for forty years, and now I want to know if I am a fool."

"That," quietly replied the court, "is a question of fact, and not of law, so I won't pass any opinion upon it, but will let the jury decide."
